WASHINGTON

Our first president was elected by unanimous consent as a result of his heroic leadership in our revolution which gave this nation its start. His role in framing our Constitution was of even greater importance for it stands as the greatest document of its kind ever made. Just as the Constitution is a living, working framework for our government, the spirit of Washington continues to represent wisdom, courage and unquenchable determination. As long as this spirit guides us, we will be worthy of our heritage.

HEART SUNDAY

Nearly 100,000 persons will visit their neighbors seeking support for the 1964 Heart Fund throughout Massachusetts on Heart Sunday, February 23, and throughout the coming week.

The Heart Sunday drive is the climactic effort of a month-long campaign by the Massachusetts Heart Association to raise $1,125,000 in the state for vitally-needed programs of research, public and professional education and community service.

Every city and town in the state will be covered -- most of them on Heart Sunday but some during other days of the week, and, according to Atty. Charles Bartlett of Boston, state chairman, every effort will be made to reach every home

Every home visited, whether a donation is made or not, will receive free educational material concerning heart health.

The Heart Fund has been warmly endorsed by national, state and local leaders, and Feburary has been proclaimed as Heart Month by Governor Endicott Peabody.

"The success of the campaign is of the utmost importance to every man, woman and child in Massachusetts, for all of us have a tremendous stake in heart health," Bartlett said.

JOHN F. DeMELLO FOR
TREASURER & TAX COLLECTOR

Our town of Mattapoisett is growing and with future growth will come larger and more complex problems in all governmental departments. For instance, over $1,000,000 passed through the Treasurer's Office last year and in 1964 that figure will be increased by $350,000. The handling of large amounts of money, such as this, demands skilled record keeping and accuracy in the many facets of receipts and disbursements. With this in mind, I respectfully ask your support in my candidacy for Town Treasurer and Tax Collector. ACCOUNTANT . BOOKKEEPER. INCOME TAX CONSULTANT . AUDITOR . BUSINESS MANAGER . TREASURER . ALMACK'S DOWN EAST, OR A NIGHT AT A COUNTRY BALL (Continued)
by Elizabeth Barstow Stoddard

(The earlier portion of the story told of the townspeople arriving at Eaton Hall on the night of a dance in the early 1850's, of the ladies and their dresses and fans, their bracelets and hairdo's, and of the gentlemen dressed in what ever outfits they considered their best.)

At the farther end of the hall, in a kind of pulpit or rostrum, sat the band, who had been engaged at 'an enormous expense,' as Barnum says, from the neighboring city of New Bedford, where they have the honor of playing frequently in the summer, and occasionally at other times. They 'were but three, a little band,' but they felt the responsibility that rested upon them, and played for a dozen at least.

The gentleman who led them played upon the violin, from which he drew the strangest of all imaginable sounds, most of which resembled the filing of saws, 'With octaves of a mystic depth and height;' and he sawed his long bow upon the strings, as if he had made a bet to cut them through in no time, and felt bound to do it. His next neighbor exercised his lungs on a kind of serpentine instrument, that grinned horribly with its ponderous jaws, and screamed the while like an enraged steam-engine; and the third and last of the trio did his best on his funnel-mouthed brass horn, blowing until his cheeks seemed ready to burst, and his eyes protruded from their sockets like those of a boiled lobster.

After the 'orchestra' (for so, out of compliment to their profession, we will call the 'musicianers') had played a 'voluntary' there was in the hall silence for some minutes, for none of the gentlemen had the courage to make the first move toward opening the ball, which all were dying to begin. The ladies looked at them, 'more in sorrow than in anger,' and sat in silence. Of course they were not expected to come over and collar them, and request them to do their duty: that is never demanded of the softer sex; if it had been, some of those present would have succeeded admirably.

Every now and then the gentlemen blushed up to the roots of their hair, giggled at their own want of assurance, and stared at the brass horn, called by courtesy a 'bugle', as if they longed to have its composition in their faces. One or two, more venturesome than the rest, tried to rise and be bold, but couldn't 'screw their courage to the sticking-place.' Failing in this, they tried to encourage their diffident companions, and endeavored to push them out upon the floor, but this was likewise a failure.

Thus things went on for some time, until at last a short, thick-set little man, with a red scarf tied around his waist, like that of a militia officer on parade, arose and went over to the ladies and selected his partner, who turned out to be the lady with the pearl beads in her hair; a long, lean, lanky, sinister gentleman, whose eyes were defended by a pair of shield-like green goggles, did the same; and by degrees the others followed their example, until there were enough on the floor to form a couple of quadrilles, or 'cowtillions,' as they called them, and the dancing began in good earnest.

'To those in populous cities pent,' dancing is only an amusement; but these simple country people, living uncontaminated in the heart of nature, looked upon it in the light of business, and went into it accordingly. Not a figure, not a step, not even the fragment of a step, did they omit. If it was worth doing at all, they thought, it was worth doing well; and they did it as well as they could faithfully following the directions of the leader of the band, whose voice was heard above the music, shouting at intervals: 'Ladies forward!' 'Gentlemen forward!' 'Partners cross!' etc., etc., He was a rousing fellow, that leader:

'Fierce as ten furies, terrible as hell;'

but he understood his own business to a hair; and if any mistake occurred, he made them all go back and begin again; by frequently doing which, the first cotillion lasted about half an hour, at the end of which time its subjects were pretty nearly used up for that occasion; the gentlemen polished their red faces with redder bandanas, and sought seats in the draughts of the open windows, and the ladies fluttered their fans like an old maid in a genteel comedy.

PACK MEETING OF CUB SCOUTS HELD

Rescue techniques and fall out shelters were demonstrated by the Cub Scouts, and a bobcat ceremony conducted at a meeting of Pack 30 at Rochester Grange Hall. Posters picturing fall out shelters decorated the hall. The art work was done by the cubs at their den meetings. Displays were set up exhibiting emergency fall out supplies, appropriate emergency canned and powdered foods, games, toys, a baby doll and extra baby clothing and supplies.

The pledge to the Flag was led by Stephen Vaughan. David Olaussen gave the Scout Promise. Lincoln Brown led everyone in singing "God Bless America". Harry Brown, cubmaster, outlined emergency measures, rescue techniques and fall out shelters.

Rescue techniques and first aid were demonstrated by the Cub Scouts in conjunction with the monthly theme "Family Alert". First aider Scott Pare applied first aid to supposedly injured Glenn Lawrence. Removal of an injured person was demonstrated by David Martin and Carl Snow. Rescuer Martin, crawling on hands and knees, with victim Snow across his back and his neck and head under the tied hands of the victim, demonstrated a method of rescuing a heavier person. With Cub Lawrence as the injured, the use of a chair as an emergency stretcher was demonstrated by rescuers Kevin Lowe and Raymond Lawrence. The stage was set with a half scale model of a cement block home basement type of fall out shelter made by the pack committeemen. An opening revealed a cot, lantern, emergency foods and supplies.

Cub Scout Lawrence led the cubs in a series of rythmic exercises demonstrated to a poem read by Mrs. George Leach, den mother. "Clapp Your Hands", led by Stephen Plaud, was sung by the scouts.

Candles were lit by new bobcats in a ceremony during which the Cub Scout handclasp was exchanged and the Cub oath given. Mr. Brown welcomed the boys and their parents into Pack 30. "The success of a boy on the Cub Scout Trail," he told the parents, "depends on the assistance parents give him in cubbing." He added that when a Cub Scout leaves the Pack to become a Boy Scout the parent places him in the hands of his scoutmaster. Receiving their bobcat pins were Stephen Vaughan and David Olaussen. Present for the ceremony were their parents, Mrs. Clifton Vaughan and Mr. and Mrs. Swen Olaussen.

Other badges awarded were Jay Labelle, wolf and 1 year service star; Lincoln Brown, lion; Brian Sherman, wolf, attendance pin, 1 year service star; David Martin, bear, attendance pin, 2 year service star; Scott Ladd, 2 year service star; Chester Smeigel, 1 year service star; Kevin Lowe, wolf; Carl Snow, bear; Scott Pare, bear with gold and silver arrows, 2 year service stars; Brett Ladd, 1 year service star. With the new bobcats as torchbearers, the three Wolf Cubs received candles and clasped hands in a living circle. The Bear and Lion ceremonies were conducted in the same manner.
